The first week of our project I bought a (VPS) virtual private server.

After I bought the virtual private server the delivery time indicated on the shipping was 24hours therefore we did not have access tot the virtual private server at the very moment after buying.

My teammate George created a GitHub repository, and he added all the team members including me.

Once all that was done, we configured the ssh security.

We went on the Unix command Linux and ran some commands.

We changed the password. We restarted the ssh process.

Although during our process of configuration we ran into some errors. We researched online to find a solution, but we were unable. Therefore, ended there and we decided to work on the weekend.

Our main goals for next week will be to fix our mistakes. Start running the virtual private server and change the port number.
